Summary

The video leaks on a random Tuesday, halfway through Shane Hollander's first season with the Ottawa Centaurs. After the relationship and subsequent marriage between infamous rivals and to-be Hall-of-Famers Shane Hollander and Ilya Rozanov was revealed at the end of the previous season, all eyes were on the Centaurs and their newlyweds.

or

A video from the Voyageurs locker room before Game 4 of Ottawa vs. Montreal leaks.

Notes

This takes inspiration from so many social media and other HR fics!!! Like a lot of inspiration. If you can think of a specific fic please mention it in the comments! I've read so many I don't know what's canon, from fics, or from my own brain any more. I am currently on my 5th whole-show rewatch, and my brain is fried.

SPOILERS FOR THE LONG GAME!!!!

This is also my first fic so if the formatting is awful I apologize.

Edit: The security cam footage takes heavy inspiration from Chapter 5 of "Don't Poke the Bear" by meetmebythelilactree!!!

The video leaks on a random Tuesday, halfway through Shane Hollander's first season with the Ottawa Centaurs. After the relationship and subsequent marriage between infamous rivals and to-be Hall-of-Famers Shane Hollander and Ilya Rozanov was revealed at the end of the previous season, all eyes were on the Centaurs and their newlyweds.

The video opens on a wide shot of the Montreal Voyageurs locker room. It is set up to show the entire room, likely some sort of security camera. The time and date in the video show that the video was taken last season, before Game 4 in the first round of playoffs: Voyageurs vs. Centaurs.

The Voyageurs players are mid-suiting up for the game, half in their jerseys and pads. Many of them are absorbed in their pregame rituals: texting loved ones, taping their sticks, etc. The tension in the room is clear, and there is a large gap between captain Shane Hollander, only missing his jersey, in the middle of the room by his cubby and the rest of the team. The only teammate who stands near him is his alternate captain, Hayden Pike. The two men seem to be deep in conversation. They look somewhat tense.

"Hey, Hollander," are the first clear words spoken in the video. They come from number 87, Gilbert Comeau.

Hollander turns away from Pike, and the locker room quiets. Not completely, but noticeably.

"Yeah?" Hollander responds.

"Just wondering if you plan on telling us how this game is gonna end?" Comeau says. His tone is antagonistic.

Players across the room stop talking and look up from their equipment and phones. Hollander pauses.

"Obviously we're gonna win. The Centaurs won't know what hit them," Hollander is valiantly trying to put on a confident captain voice, but he looks wary, guarded.

"Oh, they won't?" Comeau asks.

"The fuck is that supposed to mean?" Pike pipes up from next to Hollander whose shoulders are climbing up to his ears, though his face remains impassive.

"I was just asking if you and Rozanov figured out who's winning tonight. And if you planned on letting us know." The room goes completely quiet. No one is moving, and no one is looking at each other. There's silence for a moment before Comeau continues. "So we're winning tonight? You make him cum first last night or something?"

Pike steps forward angrily only for Hollander to splay an arm across his chest to stop him. "What the actual fuck is wrong with you, Comeau?"

"I figured we have a right to fucking know if Hollander is fucking us as well as his little boyfriend. Or, should I say getting fu—"

“That’s enough, Comeau,” Hollander says. He looks angry now, but he continues to hold Pike back who may as well have smoke pouring out of his ears. “If you really think that after all these years on this team, after all these years as your captain, that I would throw any game, let alone a playoff game...” he scoffs.

“Guess we’re all idiots then,” Comeau says, gesturing to the rest of the room. The other players keep avoiding eye contact. “Because how can we be fucking sure, Hollander?”

“Are you—?” Hollander looks around the room, and no one meets his gaze. “Are you fucking serious?” He looks the angriest anyone has ever seen him. Even angrier than when he fought Scott Hunter.

“I have fucking,” he says. “I have fucking led this team, carried you all on my backs. For years. How many times have I won the Conn Smythe? The Hart? How many times have I led this team to the Cup? I did that all while I was— While I was involved with Rozanov.” That sends an obvious ripple throughout the room as players lock eyes with wide eyes. “So fuck you for thinking I would ever do anything to jeopardize this team. I have worked my ass off to get us to where we are today.”

“How many of those did he let you win?” Comeau asks.

Hollander steps toward him, getting visibly angrier. “Oh, fuck you—”

“How many Hollander? Did you get on your knees real pretty for him last time, you fucking fa—”

Hollander rushes towards Comeau, grabbing his jersey in a tight fist and winding up with the other when the door to the locker room opens and coach Theriault walks in.

“Hey!” he yells. “Hollander!”

Hollander lets go of Comeau with a shove, breathing heavily.

“Coach,” Pike says, stepping up. “You gotta do something. Comeau is out of line. He’s accusing Shane of some serious shit and spewing fucking slurs at him.”

“Did anyone hear Comeau say these things? Call Hollander a slur?” Theriault raises his voice to address the room. No one looks up. No one says anything.

“Coach,” JJ Boiziau tries weakly.

“I said, did anyone hear Comeau call Hollander a slur?” There’s silence again. “Then I guess we don’t have a problem here. Get out there.” Theriault leaves through another door, presumably leading to the rink.

Pike runs after Theriault yelling, “Coach!”

Comeau smirks at Hollander who is standing there, staring at him. He grabs his helmet and shoulder checks Hollander and he passes him to follow his coach out to the rink, sending him stumbling back a step. No one moves for a moment.

“Well,” Hollander says, once the door closes behind Comeau. “You heard coach. Go.” His captain face is back on and his back is straight. He stands still watching everyone else gather their gear and file out to the rink in silence. Boiziau stops at the door and turns around on his way out but seems to second guess himself and leave without saying a word.

Once everyone is gone and Hollander is alone in the locker room, he deflates. He curls his spine inward, letting out a big sigh and rubbing at his eyes. He heads back over to his cubby. He leans into it with his arms above his head, taking deep breaths. Suddenly he slams his fist into the wall. He stands up again, violently shoving his jersey over his pads and grabbing his helmet. He turns toward the door and visibly re-straightens his spine and fixes his face. He shakes his shoulders out a few times before confidently following the rest of his team out of the locker room.

The video ends there.

Social media, understandably, blows up about it.

HOLLANOV REAL!!! @hollzy24girl

um has anyone else seen that video of the voyageurs locker room last season?????

hey so this is insane???

↳ James @jamsmithers

What the fuck?

hollanov <3 @formerbearsfan

ok panic aside this blatant homophobia is INSANE. and this is just ONE day we're seeing out of the weeks hollander spent on the v*yageurs after he was outed. the fact that we're only hearing about this now is so disturbing.

↳ HOLLANOV REAL!!! @hollzy24girl

i always wondered why there was such a weird quiet energy around hollzy's trade...

↳ voyageurs girl @ginabean

I'm actually sick to my stomach.

hollander MVP @24pucksonthewall did u see hollzy's face after no one stood up for him... oh i'm gonna be sick

i can't believe he went and performed like that after this... he's fucking incredible

Ottawa Centaurs  @OttawaCentaursOfficial

The Centaurs have always enforced a no-tolerance policy for discrimination and hate-speech in the locker room and between players. We hope that someday this will be a league-wide policy and not an outlier. We stand with our players, always.

SIR?????

Shane Hollander ✓ @ShaneHollanderHockeyPlayer

As I'm sure you're all aware, a video was recently leaked from inside the Voyageurs locker room before Game 4 of the Ottawa vs. Montreal playoff round last season. To my knowledge, the video has not been doctored or edited in any way.

I have remained quiet about my experience during my last few weeks with the Voyageurs out of some lasting loyalty or maybe fear, but now that this video is out there, I don't see any reason to continue my silence.

The treatment I faced after being outed from not only the management and players of the Montreal Voyageurs but the NHL as an organization was egregious. The NHL was the last professional sport to have an active and open queer player for a reason. Scott Hunter helped pave the way, but we all have a long long way to go.

Throughout my life playing hockey, I have heard horrible things said about people who are perceived as different, whether it's an attack on race, sexuality, disability, or otherwise. There are no consequences preventing this at any level, and it excludes so many talented people from the game.

I love hockey. I have built my entire life around it, and if I could continue playing professionally until I'm old and grey, I would. But the past year has almost driven me to my breaking point.

No, I did not throw any games for Ilya. Nor did he throw them for me. I would divorce him on the spot if I ever found out he did. If anything, I've always played my best hockey against Ilya, and while I'm unbelievably happy to be playing on the same team now, I'll admit the competition is something I'll miss. And yes, we have been together for longer than you thought. And yes, all my NHL accomplishments were won fair and square, by a man head over heels for the second best player in the league.

[Image Description: Shane Hollander and Ilya Rozanov, close up. They're in hockey gear, heads bowed together and hunched like they're facing off, but their faces are open and happy, laughing with wide smiles and scrunched-up eyes.]
