@redordead ok ive done some googling apparently the blonde one is some russian guy and the other is a cutie patootie named shane

Replying to @redordead

@juneonov his name is ILYA ROZANOV put some respect on his NAME! which will soon also be my last name 🙏

Replying to @juneonov

@redordead go back to class? freak!!!

Pike's Second Wife @heymanpike

i just KNOW shane misses hayden during times like these… he fr cannot stand working with rozanov

Replying to @heymanpike

@redordead wait please explain the lore i have become obsessed and my b*yfriend refuses to tell me anything because it's 'strange' and 'invasive'

Replying to @redordead

@heymanpike first of all leave ur boyfriend second of all let me call in reinforcements to explain @hollanovonice COME FORTH

Replying to @heymanpike

@hollanovonice this is my time to shine!!! Ahem @redordead listen up. So BASICALLY the Hollander family (aka shane and his dad) both played for McGill for a while (shane played when he was in high school because he was just #that #good)

Replying to @hollanovonice

@hollanovonice but of course as we all know, shane went onto play for the metros, he was rookie of the year and a crazy phenomenal player, like a history book player and EVERYONE looked up to him because wow THAT is someone who can play. not to glaze my GOAT but still. now ilya was playing for Boston and the two were neck and neck, like they were up against each other for awards all the time, did their rookie season together, the media painted them as total opposites right?

Replying to @hollanovonice

@hollanovonice but this is where things get tricky because how did two very famous hockey stars/rivals/arch nemesis become co-coaches? or coaches at all? unlike others scott hunter aren't these two still in their prime? they're so young! they play so well! they're so hot! Well, you'd be right on all accounts, but let's cut to their first game back after the all star game….

Replying to @hollanovonice

@hollanovonice the crowd was screaming, the lights were bright, the two of them were… finally over their rivalry? but then, hollander was knocked out in some nasty hit, and rozanov snapped and lost his shit because shane was out cold. obviously, the metros thought he was just having them on and it led to one of the biggest fights in hockey history….

Replying to @hollanovonice

@hollanovonice shane ended up making a near full recovery but the NHL decided that rozanov needed to chill the fuck out and basically gave him court mandated coaching week where he had to go to McGill and play nice and prove he could be a good influence on new hockey players as opposed to violent or whatever. PERSONALLY i think his crash out was valid but also i am an ilya defender until i DIE!!

Replying to @hollanovonice

@hollanovonice from here out the story gets a little blurry but it's said that ilya potentially went and visited shane in hospital and they had a heart to heart, working out all of their little issues and what not. then they started up their charity, and were seen being friendly (i will not speak my theories in here but i'm just saying it was very friendly if you ask me). then it was time for rozanov to do is mandated coaching and like 3 days into it shane showed up too? they said they'd sponsor the team and then any extra profits would go back into their charity (aww).

Replying to @hollanovonice

@hollanovonice and we figured that was the end of it! like we figured they'd turn up to a game or two throughout the season to boost the publicity and just keep running the charity but sure enough after that boot camp, they kept showing up for the team. sometimes just one of them, sometimes both (or if neither of them could make it, the assistant coach would run drills). and we were all like damn, that carbon footprint insane. JOKES but also.

Replying to @hollanovonice

@hollanovonice so yeah, ever since then the two have been coaching the team just like, in their spare time? for fun? we really don't know. it doesn't look fun two of them spend the whole game arguing, but the team is doing really well so… each to their own.

Replying to @hollanovonice

@hollanovonice also fyi i think they're in love.

Replying to @hollanovonice

@redordead ok wow.

Replying to @redordead

@heymanpike does that answer your question?

Replying to @heymanpike

@redordead i have more questions than i've ever had before.

Shane Hollander and Ilya Rozanov sat next to each other in the media room for McGill's Redbirds. Shane's posture, as always, was stiff in front of the camera. His years of media training clearly paying off in comparison to his co-coach who was actively trying to take up as much of the table as possible, with his head thrown back and letting out a loud, tired groan.

"Hollander, I do not want to do stupid interview. We win. No need to talk about it." He complained.

Shane's eyes flickered over to him and immediately back to where the cameras were still getting positioned, "I thought you loved to gloat."

"Goat? Why would I love goat? You are weirdo. I want to go home. I am tired, Hollander."

"Just a few questions, then we can go."

Ilya wiggled his eyebrows, "Where will we go?"

"Fuck off." Shane mumbled as the reporters took their seats and settled in for question time.

“Question for the both of you; you managed to win this game even without your usual first line as McCoy is out this week on parental leave. Do you think this is a good sign of things to come for your team?”

Ilya hummed in thought, “Yes.”

There was a silence as they waited for him to say literally anything else. He didn’t.

Shane looked over at him, “What Rozanov was trying to say is that it is a sentiment to the team that they can adapt and play under different circumstances, that kind of flexibility makes a great team, and a team that can trust each other. We also send our congratulations to McCoy and his wife on celebrating their first child.”

Ilya nodded, “As long as he does not end up like Pike.”

The reporter paused, “Care to elaborate?”

“Lots of kids.”

“You seem to have a personal vendetta against Hayden Pike, both on and off the field. Is this just a friendly rivalry?”

“Pah,” Ilya shrugged, “Friendly, yes. Truth is, I do not hate Pike because he is bad person, no, opposite. He is good friend to Hollander, he has cute kids, he is fine person. I hate him because he is bad at hockey.”

“Okay!” Elena, their media representative said, clapping her hands, “I think we can wrap this up now. Thank you for your questions, and so sorry to cut it short. We’re excited to celebrate with the team for the next game!”

“You’re an asshole.” Shane said to Ilya as they tucked in their chairs.

Ilya shot him a cheeky grin and suddenly the last 15 minutes had been wiped from his brain.

As the Redbirds entered the final round of the playoffs, Shane and Ilya felt tensions reach a new high.

Between the team, that was, not between them. The two of them could talk shit as much as they wanted but really it just turned them on. They'd started this as some charity thing but it had turned into more than that, it was an excuse for the two of them to see each other, and to interact in public with no speculation and the charity as a damn good cover. Of course, the money was going to a good cause, but Shane found being able to talk to Ilya in public without impertinent scrutiny was a bonus. No one could say anything bad if they were bickering for a good cause.

And if the fans on Twitter liked to speculate about their relationship because of it then so be it. Ilya loved to scroll through the 'hollanov' hashtag and send Shane cute gifs of themselves.

"I will make you a deal." Ilya whispered to Shane while the team warmed up.

"Oh, yeah?"

"Yeah, you want to make bet with me? Not scared?"

"I want to do a lot of things with you."

Ilya's eye lit up, "Right here? Hollander, the bathroom is-"

"I take it back!"

"No," He whined, "please, please let me fuck you tonight."

Shane rolled his eyes, “Whatever.”

“Whatever.” Ilya repeated, “Back to me. I make you a bet.”

“Ok.”

“If we win tonight, we get married.”

Shane paused, “What?”

“What? You don’t speak English? Married. You, me. Makes sense, yes?”

“I-” Shane was looking into his boyfriend’s eyes, “What if we don’t win?”

Ilya gave him a small smile, the sarcastic attitude dropping from his voice, “The same thing.”

“Okay. Yes, absolutely. Please.”

“You want to be my husband, Hollander?” Ilya asked, placing his forehead against Shane’s.

“Hollander-Rozanov.” He replied.

Remembering they were in public, Ilya broke their foreheads apart and slapped him on the back, “Now we win.”

Standing in the bench the two men couldn't tear their eyes from the rink. That is, of course until the Michigan Wolverines slid straight past their defence and scored a clean goal.

Ilya threw his arms up and pushed to the front of the bench, "Miller, are you baby? You play like baby today! Baby could defend better than you even with tiny baby hands. You want to be man? Prove it, Miller!"

Shane looked incredulously at his boyfriend, "Don't be an asshole!"

"I am not asshole, Miller is the asshole. Baby, idiot asshole."

"Don't listen to him, Miller!" Shane called out, "Just watch your backhand."

Ilya huffed, "You cannot speak, Hollander. You have weakest backhand, everybody knows."

"That's not what you said last night." Shane whispered to him.

Ilya held a hand to his heart, "Disgusting, Hollander. Your English makes little sense, and you are a pervert."

Shane rolled his eyes and locked back in on the game as their team began to play again.

"Miller, you are the best." Ilya said, throwing an arm around his defensemen, "Have I told you this? Best. I will give you one thousand dollars. Hollander, give me your wallet. You give Miller one thousand dollars."

“Fuck off, asshole.” Shane said, scoffing, but he couldn’t resist breaking out into a huge grin at the sight of his- no, their team celebrating around them. Champagne was brought in and sprayed all over the locker room, and soon enough a tub of gatorade was brought in and the team gathered around their coaches.

“To the best co-coaching I’ve ever seen in my life. The two of you have made this team a family, a really dysfunctional, blended family, but still a family. This is an underdog story, and we wouldn’t have it any other way. Let’s go Redbirds!” McCoy said, raising the tub above his coaches heads.

Shane and Ilya looked at each other with teary eyes, it was as good as winning the cup themselves. Ilya grabbed Shane’s face and he saw his boyfriend’s eyes go wide as he pressed a sloppy kiss on his cheek. The gatorade fell over the two of them, leaving them in a cold, sticky mess. But they didn’t notice because they were happy, and they had won.

“Good job Mr Hollander-Rozanov.” Ilya murmured to his soon to be husband.

“Why do you keep outing us on the internet?” Shane asked his husband.

“Is fun,” Ilya smirked, “I need to entertain myself while my boring husband reads his boring book.”

“It’s not boring! It’s about eco-friendly Western architecture and-”

“Boring! I am bored. I will die because I am so bored and my beautiful husband will not suck my dick.”

“You didn’t even mention that!”

“Read my mind, please.”

Shane put his book down on the coffee table and looked across at Ilya. His blonde curls were bright in the sun and his eyes were closed while the rays danced across his skin. He had never been more thankful the cottage had so many windows. The sun made Ilya look like some kind of God. And it helped that the more time he spent outdoors, the more visible Shane’s freckles became, which just did something for Ilya.

“Anyway, it is fine. I did not do much outing, just bought plane ticket for Miller’s girl so her friend can visit.”

“You’re nice.”

“Do not tell anyone. I have a bad boy image.”

“An asshole image, more like it.”

Ilya sat up and feigned shock, “Me? Asshole? No, no no” He began crawling across the couch to be on top of his husband, “You, Hollander-Rozanov are the asshole. You do not entertain your husband, even when he is so good and has not said anything about your tiny shorts.”

“I was doing yoga!” Shane tried to defend himself as Ilya began planting kisses all over his face, “Fuck off.”

Ilya licked his face.

“Uh-” A voice spoke up, “Are we interrupting something?”

Shane and Ilya both turned to see a collection of their friends and their partners standing there with barbeque gear in their arms.

Pike moved to the front of the group, “I told them not to use the spare key but they wanted to surprise you.”

“Only time I will ever say this,” Ilya said, getting off his husband, “Pike is correct. Last time he used spare key...” Both men shuddered.

“I will never wipe this image out of my head, man.”
