Summary

"Okay," Farah began, "We can announce your relationship in two ways. We can hard launch it, like ripping off a bandaid. Or we…soft launch. Slowly. Very slowly. Give people time to wrap their heads around the idea, so that by the time you guys announce your relationship, most people will be expecting it."

Later that week, Shane Hollander @shanehollander24 posted: Great game tonight @realrozanov but don't get your hopes up when Montreal's in town.

Thirty seconds later, Milly @shaydenforever replied: i'm screaming not my baby shane's first post in a year being a chirp keep the PR friendship alive

Thuy @hollanderposting: I just know his momager yuna (affectionate) put a gun to his head and said "if you really cared about your charity getting donations you'd be more active on social media" and you know what. God bless. 🙏

Or, a social media fic in a world where Shane and Ilya didn't get outed and instead decided to soft launch their relationship

Notes

I love a social media fic/outsider POV fic and I couldn't get this idea out of my head because I wanted to explore how Shane and Ilya would have come out if it hadn't been for fucking Brad.

Thuy, aka @hollanderposting, is a Vietnamese name and it's pronounced like "twee"

Oliver Twizzler @ihateredvines: do we think they actually hate each other that much??? They seemed friendly enough when they presented together at the NHL awards

> Voyagers stan #1 @voyagersforthewin replied to @ihateredvines: that was scripted
> Drew @drewwallace replied to @ihateredvines: Rozanov is the most obnoxious, arrogant, loud mouthed, narcissistic player in the league, of course Hollander hates him. The only reason Hollander doesn't talk shit is because he's a decent guy with decorum > gemma @gemma1998 replied to @ihateredvines: Just watch some youtube clips of their rivalry over the years. NHL Updates @majorNHL posted: Admirals Captain Scott Hunter makes bold statement with dramatic kiss on the ice after winning Stanley Cup

Milly @shaydenforever posted: ummmm??? I feel like I'm levitating with joy rn. I don't know who this other man is but they seem so in love

Bill McNealy @william_mcneally posted: not homophobic but this rubs me the wrong way. His team won the cup and couldn't enjoy it for 60 seconds before Hunter pulled this stunt? Now this is all the outlets are going to want to talk about. Kind of selfish if you ask me.

> Milly @shaydenforever replied to @william_mcneally: nobody asked you
> Thuy @hollanderposting replied to @william_mcneally: all he did was kiss his significant other to celebrate the major victory of his career, same as all his other teammates did. The reason it's receiving news is because the homophobia in the league from people like you has made it so that no one before Hunter has ever been brave enough to come out before. Fuck off.

Shane Hollander Updates @ShaneHollanderUpdates: Shane Hollander reposted Scott Hunter's story: [Image description: Hunter hoisting the cup at the parade with his boyfriend Kip by his side and the caption "I love my life and I love you @arthistoryiskip"]

Hi Farah,

Can we call tomorrow to discuss something important? I'd rather not tell you over email.

From,
Shane and Ilya

"Hi boys," Farah's face popped up as soon as Shane accepted her facetime request, "What's going on? Your email was a little ominous."

"Sorry," Shane apologized right away, "I may have been a little paranoid because I don't want the news to come out until we're ready, but don't worry, it's good news. Really good," he couldn't keep the smile off his face, "I proposed to Ilya. We're engaged."

Farah's lips curved up into a smile, much in the same manner as when she first learned they were together. "Boys! That's wonderful. I'm so happy for you."

"Da! I am going to marry this boring, beautiful Canadian." Through the screen, Farah saw Ilya quickly grab Shane's face so he could plant a kiss on his cheek.

"We're planning to get married in July – you're invited of course – and we want to come out around that time as well, after the season's finished. And we…"

"I wanted to show Scott Hunter how to really do big, grand romantic gesture," Ilya interrupted, "but Shane thinks it'll go better if we have a plan."

"That's where you come in."

"Okay…okay. Give me a minute." Farah clasped her hands in front of her. "We can announce your relationship in essentially one of two ways. We can hard launch it, let's call that the Scott Hunter method, like ripping off a bandaid."

"Let's not do that." Shane blurted out, unable to help himself, remembering the look on his dad's face when he found out about him and Ilya.

"Or," Farah continued, "The alternative is that we…soft launch. Slowly. Very slowly. Give people time to wrap their heads around the idea, so that by the time you guys announce your relationship, most people will be expecting it, or will have at least considered it."

Ilya and Shane shared a look. "We're okay with that."

"Alright. The first step is being more active on social media. Especially you Shane. There's some people who still don't think you two are friends."

"What? Really?"

"I haven't done the full analytics, but if I had to estimate, I'd say fifty percent of hockey fans like the #Hollanov friendship, thirty percent think you're still rivals and the friendship is all publicity for your charity–"

"They what?"

"–fifteen percent love either Ilya or Shane, but can't stand the other and hate that you two are friends now–"

"Geez."

"–and the remaining five percent hate that you're friends because they ship Shayden."

"Who?"

"Ah yes," Ilya murmured, "Don't worry about it kotenok."

“So,” Farah continued, “I think you need to first convince everyone that you are close friends. I’d start by posting more about each other on your socials and documenting when you guys are together, which I’d imagine is more often than most people realize. Keep it in the realm of plausibly platonic deniability, but show people that you are in each other's lives and are important to one another. And then slowly ramp up from there.”

Later that week, Shane Hollander @shanehollander24 posted: Great game tonight @realrozanov but don’t get your hopes up when Montreal’s in town.
