Wired Autocomplete Interview

Summary

Shane Hollander and Ilya Rozanov at the Wired Autocomplete Interview.

Notes

I had the idea to try the Wired Autocomplete Interview and it stuck with me for like weeks now. So I just wrote it. Not sure if it was a success, but here is my attempt! I hope you can have at least a little laugh.

Wired Autocomplete Interview

A white background. Two men sitting next to each other.

“Hi this is Shane Hollander”

“Ilya Rozanov”

“And this is the Wired autocomplete interview!”

Cut.

White Background.

Autocomplete suggests the most common searches on the internet.

Cut.

Back to the men, a wide grinning Ilya Rozanov staring at Shane Hollander, who just sighs. “I still don’t get why we have to do this.”

“Is because we are sexy hockey players Shane!”

Shane is rolling his eyes, a little annoyed but at the same time with a fond smile.

An arm holds out two cardboard signs with questions half taped in white. Ilya is taking one before Shane has the chance to move much. A moment later Shane holds the second board, with his name on it and the same white paper stripes stuck to it.

“We will start with me, because I’m fastest player here” Ilya grins and winks at the camera. Shane just groans.

“No you’re not, I won that all-star race.”

“Was basically tie anyway.”

Ilya grins and reads out loud “Ilya Rozanov...” with a dramatic flair as the white paper is ripped off. “height?”

There is a moment of silence until Shane snorts, hand slapping on his mouth to silence the sound.

“Why such boring question. I do not like this.” Ilya says with a frown at the board, as if it had personally offended his family. “I’m 1,90m. I don’t know feet. In Russia we use meters, is better.”

Shane looks amused. "I think it's 6 feet 3."

Ilya nods. "Yes that! Your turn."

Shane follows. "Shane Hollander height? I'm 5'10, which in meter for the Europeans would be around 1,78m I think."

Ilya rips the next paper as soon as Shane was done speaking. "Ilya Rozanov birthday? I'm disappointed. My birthday is June 15! People should know this already!"

Shane rips the next paper in his board and is greeted with the same question. He answers it before Ilya interrupts. "10th of May. And they don't Ilya, or they wouldn't google it."

"Boo so boring. Is always this boring, yes?" Ilya is looking behind the camera at someone. There is no verbal answer, but apparently some kind of answer, because he looks even more offended a second later.

"Should I go first this time?" Shane asked and Ilya nodded, still looking behind the camera and at his board with disappointment.

"Shane Hollander Position?" Shane looks up, a little confused. "For Hockey I assume."

Ilya grins. "I can tell his favourite position! It's.."

Shane interrupted his husband before more could be said. "Ilya, finish that thought and there will be no position for the next week."

Ilya stopped talking. Mouth hanging open in the attempt to speak before closing it with an audible clack. Shane nodded. "Good decision. Moving on. We are both playing Centre actually, but as we are both with Ottawa now, Ilya plays first line, I play second."

"We play together for Power Play, then I also play Wing", Ilya added.

He moved to rip the next question on his board. "Ilya Rozanov Russian speaking? Is that question if I speak Russian or is that question wanting to hear me speak Russian?"

Shane grinned. "Probably both, you're hot when you speak Russian."

Ilya looked delighted at the compliment, grinning at his husband with a wink. "Of course I'm hot. I'm always hot. But hottest when speaking Russian. разве не так, мой милый помидор?"

English subtitles for the Russian sentence popped up on screen.

[Isn't that right my lovely tomato?]

The last sentence was obviously directed at Shane, who slowly turned red.

"Do you also speak Russian, Shane?" A female voice behind the camera asked.

Shane looked up and looked at the person behind the camera. “I like to think I do! I started learning when we became a couple, my listening is pretty good I think, speaking is hard.”

Ilya looked smitten, grinning fondly at his husband. “You’re getting good!”

Shane smiled softly and pulled the next paper. “Shane Hollander Chinese?”

Ilya looked annoyed on behalf of his husband and Shane just sighed. Obviously already used to that question. Before Shane could answer Ilya jumped in.

“People are stupid, he is obviously Canadian! If you ask about roots, it's Japanese [Bleep]. Move on now!”

Cut.

Both men are holding on to a new cardboard. Ilya ripped the paper off and read out loud.

“Shane Hollander Ilya Rozanov fanmail video?”

A second of silence, where the couple shared a heavy look. Shane started talking first. “We got outed without our input through a leaked fanmail video.”

“[Bleep] you Brad!!” Ilya said loudly, staring into the camera.

The same female voice from before could be heard. “How was that for you two?”

Ilya grabbed Shane's hand and linked their fingers. “Stressful, we had plan to come out. Didn’t work out how we wanted.”

Shane looked at their hands, slowly stroking Ilya's hand with his thumb. “Not only stressful, I was afraid of the reactions. Luckily they were mostly positive, but the homophobes often scream louder. It sticks.”

A solemn moment, where both men were just looking at each other, holding hands, before Ilya nodded. “Moving on now, next question!”

Shane ripped the next question while reading. “Shane Hollander Ilya Rozanov Irina Foundation?”

Shane looked at Ilya, letting him answer the question.

Ilya smiled softly, hand going to the visible chain around his neck and holding on to the pendant.

“We made the Foundation in honour of my mother. She had depression as well and committed suicide.” Ilya stoked, visibly tearing up in memory.

Shane grabbed his hand in silent support and continued talking. “ We want to give attention to mental health and get people the help they need. I have anxiety, so it's not only for everyone in need, but also for us.”

There was a moment of silence, both seemingly stuck in their thoughts.

Cut.

Ilya smiled. “Next question! Shane Hollander Ilya Rozanov?”

A Moment of silence and then both burst out laughing.

“That’s it?”

“What is question here?”

Shane snorted at the dry follow up question and slapped a hand on his mouth to drone out his giggles. Ilyas grin was bright and amused.

“Yes we are Shane Hollander and Ilya Rozanov.” Ilya said haughtily. “Good job for using google.”

“I assume they wanted our pictures or something.” Shane added.

“Then people need to ask better questions Shane. Or follow on Instagram, there are pictures!”

Cut.

“Shane Hollander Ilya Rozanov gay?”

“YES Shane is super gay!” Ilya started. “But I am not gay. I am Bisexual.”

“I’m a normal gay, Ilya!” Shane said, with a deep irritation that could only stem from repeated discussion without results.

Ilya shook his head. “No, I’m hot and interesting Bisexual, and [BLEEP] with many women and some men. You are super gay.”

“Jesus Christ.” Shane sighed massaging his forehead.

Cut.

“Shane Hollander Ilya Rozanov kissing?”

Both men looked at the question and while Shane again turned slowly red, Ilya just had a huge grin on his face.

“Shane, we should give people what they want.” Ilya turned to Shane moving closer, obviously amused when Shane tried to move away and the red blush intensified.

“Why would people google that?” Shane was still trying to push Ilya away, while the man was doing kissy faces, trying to smooch his husband. “Ilya, stop it!”

“Shane, we must kiss, people want to see!”

“But why?”

Ilya stopped his kissing advances for a moment to think. “Because we are both hot and sexy men. People want to see sexy men kiss!”

With a launch he kissed Shane's cheek and turned to the camera, grin as big as ever. Shane just sighed.

Cut.

Shane Hollander and Ilya Rozanov are again sitting neatly on their chairs, hands empty this time around.

“This was the Wired Autocomplete Interview with Shane Hollander...” Shane started and Ilya picked up.

“And Ilya Rozanov. Next time bring better questions. Maybe funny thirst tweets, yes?”

“Ilya, thirst tweet interview is not from Wired, its BuzzFeed.” Shane said incredulously.

“Buzzfeed call me!”

“ILYA!”

Black Screen.
